Project Firstline for CNA Training Programs

Attention all CNA training programs: A survey of CNA program administrators about the implementation of Project Firstline infection prevention materials may be delayed by:

- Not really knowing where to begin
- Not having the time to create new material
- Not having capacity to create new material

If this is you, the University of Indianapolis Center for Aging & Community cordially invites you to join an informational webinar about a Project Firstline infection control implementation plan. A webinar later this month will detail what Project Firstline is and provide you with:

- A plug and play PowerPoint
- Interactive resources that will engage students in new learning

The webinar will take place on July 25 from 1-2 p.m. EDT via Zoom. Use this link to register: <https://uindy.zoom.us/meeting/register/tJldumgrTlqH92R-qj92Jordlk4lC5kwaJC>

What YOU Need to Know about Infection Prevention – Earn a Certificate

“What YOU Need to Know about Infection Prevention” is a cost-free, online five-module course addressing various aspects of infection prevention and control. The course was made possible by a collaboration between the Indiana Department of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s Project Firstline, and the University of Indianapolis Center for Aging & Community.

The five modules, developed with input from Indiana healthcare workers on their desire for further education in infection prevention, are:

- How Does Science Work?
- How Do I Know What Guidelines to Listen To?
- Using Clinical Guidelines Beyond the Clinic
- Recognize Infection Risks in Healthcare
- Candida auris: Stopping the Spread

Earn a certificate from the Indiana Department of Health by completing all five modules and passing a final exam. To register for the course, click What YOU Need to Know About Infection Prevention.
